Fourteenth Sunday in Ordinary Time

The Gospel this week might prompt us to consider how well we know our God. What is the image that we have of God? In the teaching of Vatican II, the Constitution on Divine Revelation tells us that Jesus himself, everything He is, everything He said and did, is the complete revelation of God. He is both mediator and sum total of divine revelation. But is this how we see God? Coming to us in the manner foretold in this week's first reading, meek, riding on the foal of an ass.

The Jewish leaders of Jesus' time could not accept this image of their God. They envisioned a forceful God who would destroy any enemy and establish the yoke of the law for all people to follow. They were focused completely on themselves. It was this reliance on their own understanding, which kept their hearts far from God.

Yet, when the Son of God came among us to show us His Father, remember how He told us, "If you have seen me then you have seen the Father." It is through following and coming to know Jesus that we find God. So, what does it mean that "no one knows the Son except the Father and no one knows the Father except the Son and anyone whom the Son wishes to reveal Him?" It means that our faith is a gift; no one comes to Jesus without being drawn by the Father.

It is this meek and gentle God who won the hearts of the little ones by filling them with life and joy in the Spirit and filling them with the confidence of friendship and sonship in God. He put to death the deeds of the flesh by calling us to life in the Spirit. God hid Himself from those who are in the 'flesh', those who cannot humble themselves to open their hearts to Christ. The little ones are those who would humble themselves to become open like children to believe in the Son of God.

God invites us to know Him through our experience of freedom as children of God. This freedom we find, as we are unburdened of a life enslaved to the 'flesh' in our own self-centeredness. "Come to me, all you who labor and are burdened, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you and learn from me. For I am meek and humble of heart, and you will find rest for yourselves. For my yoke is easy, and my burden light."

Jesus takes away the burden of our troubled consciences. But how is it easy to take this yoke, when we know that we are called to leave everything behind to follow Jesus. Remember the demands, "whoever loves father or mother more than me is not worthy of me, and whoever will not take up their cross and follow me is not worthy of me, and those who will lose their lives for my sake will find it."

We might think that taking Jesus' yoke is a heavier burden than we can bear, but our readings today hint that following Jesus, means living out of the Spirit He gave us. Living out of the values He taught of loving God and loving neighbor. The Spirit empowers us to act as children of God without it being a great burden because these values flow naturally from a person who knows the Father.

If we center our lives in God, we come to live as His children and God's will becomes part of us. Just like what happens as we grow up in the care of our natural parents, we often adopt their values and come to love what they love, and their values become part of us. And so, it is with the children of God.

Jesus gave us the example of a person who lived out of the Spirit. So, how do we learn to live as children of God? We can look to Jesus, who is the mediator and sum total of divine revelation, and reflect on three simple words He gives us today: "learn from Me"
